

LAST STOP (Oct 21/25)

What if earth is where spirits come to die? They have travelled around the universe taking on different forms but the physical form they occupy here is the last one. When you think of it.....everything on this planet is finite. The universe might be infinite but this dimension has a beginning and an end. The infinite is pretty hard to comprehend but a lifetime is pretty simple. Now and then we get a metaphysical insight into our existence but everything seems to boil down to a simple acceptance. Good and evil, right and wrong and all other paradoxes seem to confuse us but the spirit is set on a specific course, a different destination. Once it lands on earth it is at the last stop on a collision course with its destiny. It's almost like a script and a story board are given to us when we are born and we act out our part as best we can. It doesn't matter if we decide to turn left or right.....that decision was already made for us by the spirit that inhabits our body.

What if earth is the graveyard for spirits? What if earth is the last stop?